More Than Just A Place Of Work

A History of Dunedin's Hillside Railway Workshops

Ian Dougherty

Standing tall in South Dunedin, Hillside Railway Workshops was a significant employer and generator of tradesmen for 138 years. Known for its prodigious manufacture of wagons, carriages and locomotives, this book details these Hillside fine products. As a wagon and locomotive repair shop, Hillside was strategically important, but as well as the all-important output, accomplished author Ian Dougherty captures what it was like to work at Hillside. Card covers, 240 pp, 160 black & white and 80 colour photographs.

A West Coast Engineman

Ian Tibbles

Ian takes us on a journey about the West Coast as a Greymouth-based NZR fireman from 1962 to 1970. Reliving at the various West Coast depots, Ian provides insight on what it was like “getting down the road” on the various lines and classes of engines. The vagaries of narrow grate engines through to the “modern” J class are all discussed. Covering the golden age of steam on the Coast, without doubt this is a book for lovers of NZR steam in the 60’s. Card covers, 251 pp, 163 black & white and 99 colour photographs, track plan, 2 maps and diagrams.

Reflections on Charming Creek

Mills and Mines, Tramways and Walkways of a Pioneering West Coast Enclave

Bill Prebble

The story of the South Island’s most picturesque timber and coal tramway has been told at last. Morphing from an incline tramway to one hewn through the Ngakawau gorge, damp track, sharp curvature, and steep gradients combined with unbraked coal trucks made getting trains to destination a challenge. The story of the men, this fledgling company and how it coped with the Depression, war years, successive bridge failures, and a riot add intrigue into this fascinating operation. Card covers, A4 portrait format, 188 pp, 77 b&w and 31 colour photographs, maps, diagrams, and track plans.
